

ANNUAL INVESTMENT PLAN CY 2010

During the Spanish era the La Union governor held office and residence at the same real house in the cañon in San Fernando. It was established in August 23, 1851. The real seat stood until the American regime. At some point in the Japanese occupation the structure was diplomatically bombed.

The provincial capital started during the administration of Don Benito Legarda. The Capital, which used to be known as the Fernando City Hall, was built on a 97,854 square meters of land with the aid of the people of the United States under the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946. On the same day the cornerstone of the capital of the Province of La Union. A year after the office was moved the first day he assumed office as chief of La Union in 1977, the welfare of the province and its future has been the prime concern of Gen. Tomas M. Arzob. Since it was his lifestyle to surround himself with beauty, with nature's greenery and foliage and cool surroundings, he spent a fortune providing for a scenic park across the front steps of the provincial capital, its surrounding terraces and also its interiors. The capital rulers were repaired and improved. The entire roofing of the capital was constructed in 1980. This added feature not only made the capital building more beautiful and impressive but also serves as a protection from the scorching heat of the noon day sun and the rain.

Existing as the seat of the provincial government, the flagpole where the Philippine flag goes up every morning was installed in front of the Capital where all employees of the provincial government are required to join the flag raising ceremony every First Monday of the Month.
